By the issue of bonds and private subscription, and from current taxes for several years, the library board bought a site and eracted a building costing nearly $400,600, and known as one of the three or four best equipped of American library buildlags.

The old atheneum came into the new library, making its books free to the public, the city paying expenses of administering them. The aggregate income of the joint libraries has been from $50,000 to $75,500 per

During the construction of the building Mr. Putnam was engaged in purchasing books, going abroad for the purpose, and at the end of his first seven years' adminstration he had added some 50,000 volumes to the 12,000 originally possessed by the atheneum. At the time he left the library in 1881 it had grown to be the fifth in the United States in point of circulation, and ranked about the same in the point of income.

Professor Dyche, of the Kansas university, delivered a very interesting fecture in the chapel a week ago. His address was a combination of the most interesting features of his three fectures on Greenland. He was greeted by an enthusiastic audience whose attention he held to the very last by his thrilling word pictures and splendid stereofteon views. This was the fifth number of a fecture course arranged by the Oratorical Association. The association makes the fecture course one of the special features of its work, the object being to encourage the higher class of entertainments. The enterprise has been uniformly successful for three years and the preparations for next year are taking a more extensive scale than ever.

Although we did not get the appropriation for a new building that we had hoped for, the attitude of the legislature toward the university was quite satisfactory in other respects. Our pharmaceutical graduates will now be registered on just half the experience formerly required. The legislature also provides for a geographicat survey and made an appropriation to cover the expenses of transportation. The head of our biological department will be chier of the survey with headquarters at the university.
